pair a trial as a prisoner ever usu to the courts of New-York. He convicted himself out of his own mouth, and I decided; that he must be shot. You say that I am insane. If I am, then every man that ever stood up and bled for his country is insane. The decision as to my fate is in your hands. If you convict me, I shall not appeal, for, I suppose, that, even in this land of liberty, you cannot shoot even a dynamiter with impunity.

With regard to my saying, as Dr. Hardy claims, that I had a mission to go as a nurse to the Soudan or India, I desire the say that I do not claim to have had any such mission. What I said was that, having been educated as a nurse and a surgeon, if I were acquitted by you. I would like to go to the relief of my suffering countrymen. But I would the same for American soldiers, if a war should break out in this country. I will say frankly that men have no attraction for me, except when they are sick and suffering. They are so horridly cross then that it is a positive pleasure for me to reduce them to subjection. As to my going on a lecturing tour, I have only to say that, in prison, I was pestered, overwhelmed, with the offers of lecturing agents. I gave them one uniform reply—that, I would if acquitted, accept any number of lecturing engagements, upon the one cendition that Rossa should be compelled to traver with me, so that I might use hum as a practical illustration of dynamite on the human frame.

that Rosea should be compelled to travel with me, so that I might use him as a practical illustration of dynamite on the human frame.

I will say again simply that I was perfectly justified. He was a murderer, but had not the coarage to strike his blows openly and risk the consequences. He skulked here and trusted to Americans to protect him. He prates about being a patriot; he is only a swindler. He swindled in patriotism, and he swindled in the employ of a stamaship company. He didn't think it was necessary to tell me or you that. If he had been in earnest, and only mastaken, I would have spared him. Ireland may or may not have her wrongs. I shall not discuss that problem now. But he was a bloodthirsty imposter, sending paid tools to do what he had not the esurage to do, and I wished to kill him. I could have killed him, and I would have killed him, if he had not begged piteously for his life. When he felt, he looked up at me like a wounded dog, beseching his life, and I had not the heart to take it. For I am only a woman, after allone of a race that never strikes a man when he is dying. You may say what you like of the English, but you dare not say that there are many, If any, co wards among them. I could have killed him with my second shot. My first shot was aimed at his heart, but I was, naturally, a little nervous. I emptied my pistol, as I moved away from him, because I did not wish to bave a loaded pistol in the gathering crowd. I was more considerate of inoffensive persons than he has ever been. I did not intend to kill this yelping our with any of those last shots, because I did not care to take such a life. it was not worth sking. It occurred to me just then that, if i killed him, Fish tren the world over would say, "See how an Irfshman can die for his country! Behold Jeremith O'Donovan Rossa, the marry."

Assistant District-Attorney Nicoll cross-examnied

Assistant District-Attorney Nicoll cross-examnical

Assistant District-Attorney Nicoll cross-exampled Mrs. Dudley. He asked:

When you left England, did you leave England with the intention of shooting O'Donovan Rossal A.—No. sir; that intention was formed after I got here.

Q.—How long have you been familiar with the name of Rossal A.—I have heard his name in England, but took very little notice of it. Since I have been here, I have learned that he seems to be a god among the Irish people.

Q.—When did you form your purpose of killing him! A.—Certainly not until after the London explosions.

Q.—Did you intent to give him the subscription that you premised in your letters! A.—Yes, sir; and I gave it to him.

you promised in your letters? A.—Yes, sir; and I gave it to him.

Q.—What was it? A.—A bullet.

Q.—What was it? A.—A bullet.

Q.—What was it? A.—A bullet.

Q.—You did not intend to give him any money? A.—

No, sir, not for dynamite nor for his grocer's bill. He tanght me my lesson, and I learned it quickly. I wrote the letters, because he had written in his paper that any means against England or the English were rightful. I wrote them as the first step to ward killing him. I also visited his office, unknown to him, and saw him when he did not know who I was. I wanted to see him, and to hear his defence, before I killed him.

Q.—You wished to ascertain his principles? A.—No, str; he has none.

Q.—Heas? A.—He has very few.

Q.—His character? A.—He does not possess any.

Q.—What do you mean by a trial—trying him? A.—

What is generally meant—as a jndre, without a jury. I gave him soveral fair and impartial hearings. I spent an hoar and a half with him in the parior of Sweeny's Hotel, the Saturday before, distending patiently and judicially to his defence. But his evidence left me but one course. I was compelled to convict him, and sentence him to death.

Q.—You know, of course, as a lady of extraordinary

Hotel, the Saturday before, last his evidence left me but one course. I was compelled to convict him, and sent-cace him to ceath.

Q.—You know, of course, as a lady of extraordinary intelligence, that the laws of England, as well as those of America, guarantee an accused person trial by jury! A.—Yes, sir; and in England trial by jury is no sham. It is your laws here, not English laws, that need change. Why didn't you try him and save me the trouble!

Q.—Well, v. 6 have endeavored to get a complaint within the law against him. A.—Parion me, but I don't thuis there has been any great effort. His paper is in itself evidence sufficient against him. Why, sir, it is a standing incentive to murder. It seems to me that some one else could have reached him as easily as I did. Rossa conceales that himself. He has said in his paper, why does not some one that is not paid with English gold, as that Dudley woman was, put out of the way Pierrepost Edwards and Minister West? If it was easy and justiliable, as he suggested, to kill these gentlemen, why was it not just as easy and justiliable, as he suggested, to kill these gentlemen, why was it not just as easy and instillable to kill him! I found it easy, though I am only, what he called ne, a "British spoy" [with an initiation of the Irish brogue.]

Q.—Did you contemplate assaults upon others? The newspapers say— A.—For God's sake, don't talk to me about newspapers.

Prish brogue.]

Q.—Did you contemplate assaults upon others? The newspapers say— A.—For God's sake, dou't talk to me about newspapers.

Q.—Fardon me. I only meant to say that it was reported that you intended to kill Parnell, Glarkstone and my honored chief, the District-Autoriet, Mr. Martino?

A.—That's false I don't question the voracity of the newspapers, but I do question their veracity. Parnell is amenable to the laws of my country. Gladstone has gone wrong. He is not fit to govern. He is the right than in the wrong place. Neither of them deserves to be shot. But District-Attorney Martine does—for keeping me in prison so long.

Q.—Nay I be permitted to inquire whether that feeling extends to myse'!! A.—Well, that depends. I don't think, though, that you would be a great loss to the community at large.

Q.—You are the same lady who is mentioned, as Luelle Dudley, in the official records from England, as a violently insone person? A.—You must proceed, sir, upon a different assumption. I am not aware that I have changed my identity. But you claim I am insane.

Q.—Are you the Jerson? A.—You must proceed, sir, upon a different assumption. I am not aware that I have changed my identity. But you claim I am insane.

Q.—My learned associate, Mr. Purdy, suggests that I have changed my identity. But you claim I am insane.

Q.—My learned associate, Mr. Purdy, suggests that I have changed my identity. But you claim I am insane.

How wouldn't stop to let me shoot him. So I did the best I could, under somewhat trying circumstances. Then, you know, Jeremiah has always favored assassimation. He said that Cavendish and Burke were rightfully butchered. He even went so far as to call Phalan a traitor, because he took the infernal machine out of the said to me: "What are a few lives, more or less, by the side of our holy cause!"

Q.—It has been suggested that, if you were acquitted, you would kill such a craven cur as he h

Why, sir, I assure you that he is not worth powder and bail.
Q.—But some of the newspapers say— A.—Oh, please let me alone about the newspapers
Q.—But some one has suggested, them—to leave the newspapers out—that you do not think that your work in America is done; that, if you were released, you would set about killing a number of those whom you repard as enemies of your country! A.—Oh, how thresome! It is not, and never has been, my business to put everyfinedly out of the way that ought to be. If you don't want Ressa here, why don't you remove him yourself, and not leave it for me to do! I don't pretend to have the lime of the inclination to go about on a general shaughtering tour—removing overybody that the American people don't want among them. They ought to do a little of that sort of thing, as you Americans say, for themselves.

Judge Gildersleeve—Is it true, Mrs. Dudley, that you were confined as a lunatic in an asylum in England, as appears from papers produced in this case! A.—Yes, air; it is true. THE VERDICT OF ACQUITTAL.

Dr. Edward C. Mann testified that Mrs. Dudley was authering from epileptic insanity, with homicidal and suicidal tendencies. He did not think she was suffering from chronic general mania. He thought she might re-cover if kept in a quiet home.

Assistant District-Attorney Nicell said that he wished to make a statement before the case was given to the Assistant District-Attorney Nicoll said; that he wished to make a statement before the case was given to the light. He said that the District-Attorney had requested Drs. Macdonald and Hardy to examine Mrs. Dudley, and had also employed other physicians. All had said that she was insane, but the only method in which the matter could be definitely settled was by a commission or by the decision of a lury. It was thought best to have the case tried by a Jury and then to ask the Judge to commit the defendant to a State lunatic asylum.

Judge Gildersleeve delivered a short charge to the jury, saying that if they found that the defendant at the time of the commission of the offence was laboring under such a defect of reason as not to know the nature and quality of her act, or to distinguish between right and wrong as to it, they should acquit.

Foreman Simons polled the jury, but as they did not at once agree they left the room. In a few minutes they returned and the foreman announced a verdict of "not guilty on the ground of insanity at the time of the commission of the offence."

Mrs. Dudley smiled at the verdict and shook hands warmly with ner counsel. She said afterward that she was much pleased with the verdict.

Assistant District-Attorney Nicoll arose as soon as the verdict was recorded and said: "In accordance with Section 454 of the Code, I move that the defendant be committed to the State Lunatic Asylum until she is same. The law provides for such a course when a defendant is acquitted on the ground of insanity, and there is reason to believe that his release would be dangerous to the o hence that has been said: "My associate and myself have pritten to some of the relatives of this unfortunate woman in England, and some of her friends have just strived. I have scarcely spoken to them, but I may be able to propose a plan that will be of advantage to all. I should like to present the matter to the Court at a future time."

Judge Gildersleeve said that he would hear argument on Thursday morning. He thought that it would be proper, if it could be accomplished, that the defendant's own country, rather than the State of New-York, should bear the burden of her maintenance. It is understood that a position as nurse in an asylum is open to Mrs. Dudley in England. Mr. Nicoll was not convinced that any arrangement to allow Mrs. Dudley to leave the State was possible. Mrs. Dudley was taken back to the Tombs.

STEPHEN MERRITT LONGING FOR POWER. Stephen Merritt, undertaker and clergyman, after being elected to stay at home from the Assembly last fall, being Prohibition candidate in the Hild Dis-trict, still longs for political fame and power. A " mass-meeting" was held in his interest at the Grand Opera heeting "was held in his interest at the Grand Opera-House last night. About 200 people were present. Mr. Merritt had signed a request to the newspapers to send reporters there. He was nominated for State Senator rom the Villth District, and after five minutes of per-masion, got over his coyness and accepted. W. K. Pey-on presided, and the Rev. M. H. Pegson, James A. EXCITING SPORT AT SHEEPSHEAD BAY. THE SELLING SWEEPSTAKES FOR TWO-YEAR-OLDS

RESULTS IN A DEAD HEAT.

What a pleasure it is for the true lover of racing to see McLaughlin ride! He makes far better use of his opportunities than any other jeckey in the country and is beyond all question the Archer of America. No worder that he is a propular. He rights desarres it. wonder that he is so popular. He richly deserves it. The followers of his mounts are always sure not only of honest effort, but of the best start, and of the most resolute, determined riding all the way, that will get out o a her-se all the speed which he has in him. No starter can get the better of McLaughlin. Pineus, Caidwell and Sheridan are all alike to him. None of them can stop his famous running starts, which so ofter settle short races before the horses have gone a hundred yards. Hayward, Blaylock, Isane Murphy, William Donohue and Shauer are all skilful in the saddle. But if any of them is worth $5,000 a year to an owner McLaughlin ought to get $25,000. He can start all around them, he can seize every chance in a race far better than they, and he drives a sluggish horse in at the finish with unequalled force. All honor to the Archer of America. If Pierre Lorillard, George L. Lorillard, Mr. Withers and Mr. Kelso had not had on riding against their inferior jockeys this year their bank accounts would have been bigger.

The way in which Meaton, Moran and half a dozen other boys floated the starter, insulted the club and in censed the public by their reckless contempt for orders in the first race was disgraceful, and no club ought to permit such scenes. The young rascals richly deserved the strap. They spoiled start after start and kept the infuriated spectators waiting for more than forty min-ntes. Then Caldwell lost his head and dropped the flaz te a start which left only Little Minch, Buckstone and Sutler in the race, and they were the placed horses. Lit-Satter in the race, and they were the places horses. It the Minch showed rare speed, but if Backstone, who was handled by an incompetent little boy, had been well rid-den, the finish would have been closer. Oddly enough, Mr. Withers's trainer allowed his regular jockey, Shauer, to withers a trainer allowed his regular jocket. That's a strange way to manage a stable, for Buckstone's chances if ridden by Shaner were excellent.

It was a close finish in the second race between the fa-orite Albia and the second choice Nitot. Nitot was ridden by McLaughlin, and though Albia won McLaughlin's riding was superb.

In the Great Two-Year-Old Selling Sweepstakes, as the In the Great Two-Year-Old Sching Sweepers, Mr. N. W. Killson club calls it, though it is not great in any sense, Mr. N. W. Killson W. L. Stoff Cassatt's filly Wait-a-While made a dead heat with Mr. R. A. Hazein, D. Willson G. D. Willson Scott's filly Petticoat. Wait-a While won the run-off easily. The jockeys did as they pleased, paying no attention to the starter's orders, Moran and Meaton being especial to the shirter's orders, aloran and acates some especial-ity bold and defiant. When the flag fell after a delay of forty minutes, Little Minch was in front with a running start, Sutler second and Buckstone third. Herbert, Jim Renwick, Billy Glimore and Glengarine got off so badly that they had no chance. Jim Renwick ran with electric speed in the second quarter mile, but had too much ground to make up and could not get a place. The only horses in the race in the last furiong were the three that started first, and McLaughlin's running start settled the race, Little Minch winning by a learth in 1:15%, Buckstone second, three lengths before Sutler, who was a half length before Manitoba, Belle B. fifth, Jim Renwick sixth, the rest pulled up. The directors of the Central and Hudson River Rail-road Company to-day declared a dividend of ½ per cent, payable on July 15, for the quarter ended to-day, which is in exact accordance with the infimations given in these columns on June 17. No statement of the quart-er's business was given out and none will be till the usual quarterly statement about August 15 is made to the State Commissioners.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway directors to-day met and declared no dividend, but furnished for publication an estimate of the company's business for the six months ending with to-day. We give it six months of the preceding two years. A surplus of $1,746,802 for the stock in the six months in 1883, and there has been a decrease of about $10,500,000 in the of $948,611 in the six months of 1884, is changed this year into a deficit of $85,606 from the amount required year into a deficit of $85,606 from the amount required to pay the interest on the second consolidated mortgage bonds of the company. In the following comparison for three years the figures for 1883 and 1894 are the actual ones, as by sworn reports, against estimates for 1835:

If in reviewing to-day's stock speculation we start out with the assumption that the pool in Delaware, Lackawanna and Western yesterday on a decline of 4 per cent succeeded in anioading only about 18,000 shares out of its holding of some 120,000 shares, and that all the various pools in other stocks have one common "Grand Centre," to-day's operations are casily explained and comprehended. But upon any other possible hypothesis the history of the stock Exchange does not furnish another example of so unmatural a stock market as was presented to-day. Delaware, Lackawanna sud Western naturally was the centre of attraction at the opened down 5s per cent at 964, and rapidly declined to 94 and almost as rapidly recovered to 9554. The general list responded only fractionally to Delaware, Lackawanna and Western's decline, but fairly jumped when it advanced. Central and Hudson, Lake Shore, and St. Paul were made special favorites in the advance, while Union Pacific, Western Union and Northwestern responded loss energetically, because of the pressure of orders to sell them on each 1s per cent advance. The market was a mixed one all day and raders were more than asquily confused. The principal declines were: Pacific Mail St. Central and Hudson—ex-dividend—St. St. Paul St. Lake Shore 7s. Manitobal, and Burbington and Quincy 1s per cent. The principal declines were: Pacific Mail St. Union Pacific 1s, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and Western and Western and Western and Western and Delaware, Lackawanna stoffware one and strong. Bids were 3g for the 3s and 1s higher for the 4s. Annexed are the closing quotations:

In London British consols opened 45 per cent higher at 994s, but afterward reacted and closed unchanged at 993, for both money and account. United States bonds were not quoted. American railways were irregular. First quotations showed general declines from which there were some recoveries that were responsive to the early home railies in price. Thus Central and Hudson after opening steady at $67s rose to $78s, and $t. Paul after a decline of 4 to 724 tose to 738. Both the declines and advances were nothing more than reflections of the latest received home quotations. The Bank of England lost $31,000 buillion on balance.
